IF TIMBER owners of Hempstead and Nevada counties "come through" with the State Forestry Commission's request for the blocking of an additional 50,000 acres this area ought to have a CCC camp thrown in for good measure. It is obvious that CCC camps go along with the forestry program, and the chances are that if sufficient timber is blocked our area will get such a camp.

Test Suit Against Arkansas Lumber Firms to Be Filed

Lee Wilson Concerns Named for Alleged NRA Code Violations

END HELENA STRIKE

Walkout Threatened by A. F. of L. in Eastern Tire Factories

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—Federal District Attorney Isgrig said Tuesday he would file suit to test the timber products code.

He said he planned to file the suit Wednesday, based on information obtained by an NRA auditor from the records and employees of two Mississippi county lumber companies.

Action to Be Taken
LITTLE ROCK—An enforcement test of the NRA lumber code will be launched Tuesday when James J. Harrison, state compliance director, turns over to Fred N. Isgrig, United States attorney, evidence of direct violations by two manufacturing plants.

The Lee Wilson Lumber Co., of Mississippi, and the Lee Wilson Lumber Co., of Mississippi, are the only ones in the state, Mr. Harrison said, "against which we have evidence of direct, open violation of the lumber code. If Judge Martineau grants our petition for an injunction, I expect all the other responsible firms in the state to continue compliance with the code."

"If they do not I shall move immediately against them, including the Chicago Mill & Lumber Co. of West Helena and the E. L. Bruce Company."

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—(P)—Funeral services will be held here Wednesday for Adolph S. Ochs, unique genius of American Journalism whose career of 37 years as a publisher ended suddenly in death here Monday.

Burial will be in New York. Ochs died of a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 77.

He worked himself up from a "printer's devil" to be publisher of the New York Times.

At the age of 20, Mr. Ochs came to Chattanooga from Knoxville and bought a half-interest in the Chattanooga Times for $1,750. Two years later he became sole owner.

In 1896 he took control of the New York Times, and within three years had placed it on a paying basis.

Ochs' death occurred only three weeks after the death of his life-long associate, Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times, who succumbed March 20.

Charges against June Brashear, third suspect in the robbery, were dismissed last October after Brashear had stood trial twice in Hempstead circuit court, each trial resulting in hung juries.

Mere Men Look Like Ants, Viewed From Canyon Edge

Project Is So Colossal That the Imagination Is Stunned

DEPRESSION HELPS

Able to Hire Twice as Many Men, Contractors Finish 3 Years Early

The story of the construction of Boulder Dam is one of the most fascinating in the history of all man-made wonders. Here is the second of the series of six stories which tell of the motives, methods, machines, men, and materials which made the engineering "miracle" possible.

BY OREN ARNOLD
NEA Service Special Correspondent

BOULDER CITY, Nev.—You see Boulder Dam for the first time from a rocky edge, perhaps 1000 feet above the bed of the Colorado—you just hang on a railing while the wind flaps your coat, and you stare down with your mouth open.

You hear a muffled roar from the depths of the canyon. Then, suddenly, it dawns on you that the massive dam is covered with ants! As your eyes focus, it comes alive. Specks, crawling to and fro about the structure, on scaffolding, on the great U-shaped powerhouse, on "wires" that stretch everywhere, even on the very walls of the canyon.

You shrink inwardly, and exclaim something under your breath. "Ants! But even then you have no adequate conception of Boulder Dam's unprecedented size."

No better proof has ever been shown that men are like ants—that enough men with enough time and enough organization can do "anything." One man is infinitesimal here. Yet Man Power in a generic sense is quickly evident, indeed is impressive in its limitless strength and ability. Not since the great pyramid of Egypt was built has man power been so pretentiously used on an engineering project.

Helped By Depression
The engineers in charge will tell you that—strangely—the depression has been responsible for pushing work ahead of schedule. That is because the construction firm, Six Companies, Inc., was able to hire twice the number of workmen it had anticipated, at a wage fair to all. Four thousand men can build an ant hill in about half the time required by 2000 ants.

But that move redoubled the demand for organization genius, too. Ringling's circus is famous for its systematic handling of myriad details—but you should study the system at Boulder Dam!

Remember, also, that the great Egyptian pyramid, heretofore a criterion for engineering achievement, required 100,000 slaves working 20 years.

Miracle of Strength
The 4000 workmen in Black Canyon have built a dam 765 feet high, which is about equal to the Woolworth Building in New York, and which is by far the largest dam in the world. At the bottom it is thicker than two city blocks; its length on top, were you soon will drive your car, is nearly four blocks. And three years haven't passed since the first shovel of earth was turned.

But that's just one item, the dam proper. Before it could be started the human ants had literally to make their holes underground. The workers dug four tunnels 56 feet in diameter through solid rock for a combined distance of three miles.

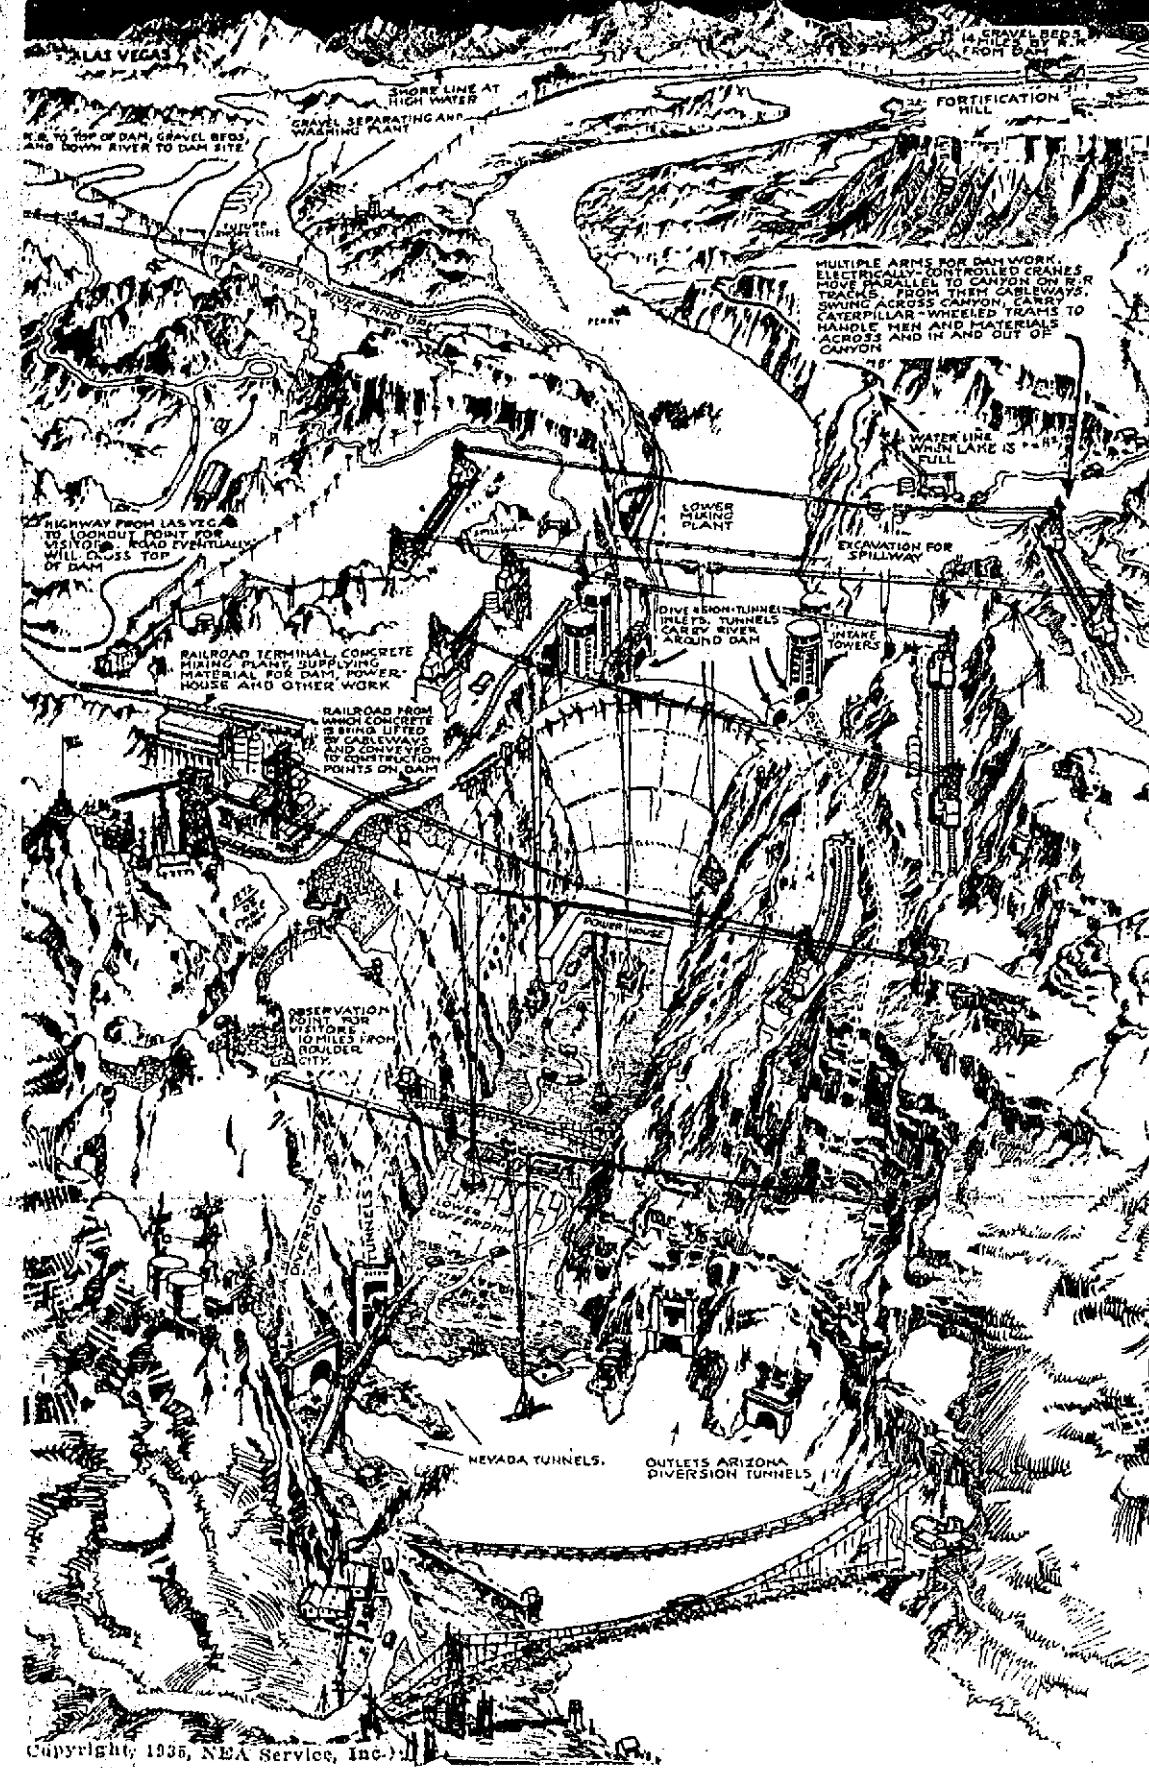

A gigantic coffee dam then diverted the roaring Colorado out of its normal bed into the tunnels, leaving the actual dam site dry.

When father was a boy, those tunnels alone would have defied the best brains of engineers.

Negro Trio to Be Tried Wednesday

Will Be Arraigned for Glenn Williams' Death at Fulton Bridge

Andrew Smith, Drew Williams and Moten Hill, negro prisoners held for the murder of Glenn L. Williams, are scheduled to go on trial in Hempstead circuit court at Washington Wednesday morning.

Williams was killed while on duty at the Fulton toll bridge last spring in what officers believe was an attempted holdup of the bridge receipts.

Disposition of cases heard Tuesday: Hurst Perry pleaded guilty to burglary and grand larceny. He was given two years and one year suspended sentence on each count.

Green Abner drew a one year sentence on a plea of guilty to assault with intent to kill.

Freddie Mack was convicted by a jury on a burglary charge and sentenced to three years.

A jury at 2:30 p. m. was deliberating the cases of Mitchell Moore, George Harris, Raymond White and Ned Bronson, all being tried together on charges of burglary and grand larceny.

The murder trial of Joe Maxwell, negro, will probably be held later in the day. Maxwell is charged with the fatal shooting of Annie Pearl Bledshaw, negro woman, of Hope.

Rear Admiral Dies

Admiral Willard had a long and distinguished career. During the World War he was superintendent of the naval gun factory in Washington, and for this service was awarded the navy cross.

Poll Tax Deadline to Be Wednesday

To Cost $2 Instead of $1 If It Is Assessed After April 10

All qualified electors in Hempstead county must assess their poll taxes by Wednesday April 10 if they expect to vote in the primaries and general election of 1936, according to Mrs. Isabelle Onstead, Hempstead county tax assessor.

This is a law passed by the Arkansas legislature at the last session. Unless a person assesses his poll tax before April 10, it will be necessary to file a supplemental assessment later, costing another dollar, or making the total cost of the poll tax $2, whereas by assessing poll taxes now the voter will be allowed to purchase one for $1.

Mentally Unfit Found Injured at Birth

Now that so many of our states are considering laws relative to sterilization of the unfit, particularly the mentally defective, you might like to see some of the figures concerning the distribution of mentally defective persons in various populations.

"It is ordinarily believed that so-called mental deficiency represents merely a lessened amount of intelligence. You should realize, however, that there are many types of mental defects associated with various forms of physical disturbances.

"There are, for example, cases in which the brain has been injured during birth, cases of accumulation of fluid in the brain, those in which the brain is smaller than normal; others in which disease has damaged the brain; some of inherited disturbances, such as Mongolian idiocy and various forms of familial idiocy, and cases in which the glands fail to function properly, resulting in degeneration of the nervous system.

"The most significant factor at present involves inheritance of such defects. Recently a specialist analyzed groups of mental defectives with a view to determining the extent to which heredity is involved. His conclusion was that there was little support for the idea that heredity plays an important role in causing mental deficiency. He feels that injury at birth is much more important as a causative factor.

Because some people have felt that the age of the parents is of considerable importance in relationship to the genius of the child, a special study was made on this point.

Figures in a survey made in Great Britain indicated that the ages of the fathers of Mongolian idiots and mentally defective children were on the average greater than those of the fathers of normal children; furthermore, that there are usually greater differences between the ages of the father and mother in the case of the mentally deficient child than in the case of the mentally sound child.

The idea that parents of advanced years produce more brilliant children than younger parents goes back to the ancient Greek Aristotle, who said, "Premature conjunctions produce imperfect offspring, feeble in mind and short in stature."

The majority of scientific observers today are convinced that the influence of the age of the parents, in the absence of any rare hereditary factors, is very slight. The one way in which the age of the parents may enter directly in the causation of a mental defect is the difficulty in childbirth involved with very old or very young mothers.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTION

A Realistic Picture of Modern America

Louis Adamic, already known as a writer of more than ordinary power, turns to fiction in "Grandsons" and writes a novel which, for all its technical defects, at least exhibits an understanding of the deep currents of American life which is rare in current literature.

There is nothing either of the cloistered estheticism or of the two-car radical about Mr. Adamic. He gets down among the steel puddlers, the migratory farm hands, the immigrants and the mechanics, lives with them, talks their language—and draws from them a steady, two-fisted and realistic Americanism.

In this book he is concerned with the vast spiritual restlessness of the nation. He presents us with three men, descendants of a Croatian immigrant who was killed in the Haymarket bomb outrage in Chicago, in the '80s, and contrasts their diverse paths.

One becomes a big-shot gangster. The second becomes a radical labor organizer. The third becomes a newspaper reporter and tries to fuse his own mental and emotional confusion by writing a novel about the other two.

And when, by the natural hazards

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Beauty Sleep is Urgent

This is the time to get tired winter complexion back into shape for the Easter parade. Skins that have become dry from steamheated rooms and clogged pores, caused by excessive cold dust in the air, all need special attention.

First of all, see that your digestive organs are functioning properly. You can't have a smooth, clean skin if your physical health isn't all it should be.

A three-day liquid diet will give your stomach a chance to rest. After that, eat plenty of fresh, spring greens, vegetables and fruits. Drink eight glasses of water a day and sleep eight hours each night. Give up parties and social functions until after Easter. When you see how nice you look in your new spring evening gowns, you'll be glad that you did.

If you have a dry-skin problem on your hands, invest in one of the new cosmetic kits that are designed especially to correct this condition. Read the directions carefully and use the preparations regularly.

One particularly good package of this type contains cleansing cream that melts quickly and removes every trace of grime, a tissue cream which softens the skin and makes it smooth, and an excellent lotion that has no drying effects.

After you have washed your face with soap and water, cleanse with the first cream. Remove carefully and pat on the lotion. Then, using upward and outward strokes, smooth on a layer of the nourishing cream. Remove the excess; go to bed, leaving a little on your skin.

NEXT: Easter hands.

The DARK BLOND

A CARLETON KENDRAKE © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MILLICENT GRAVES, secretary to GEORGE DRINGOLD, had her employer in his office dead. Millicent has a notebook in which Dringold had begun to dictate a confession. In public she rushes away, registers at a hotel under an assumed name.

JARVIS HAPP, a stranger, offers to help her. He sends her to a beauty shop where she is transformed into a blond. Then he takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. She meets HARRY NORMAN, his nephew, ROBERT CAISE, and MRS. HAPP.

That night a note under her door informs Millicent, "The woman in black came to her." Millicent sees the woman in black drive away and follows in Robert Caise's coupe, but runs out of gas. She walks home, enters the chauffeur's quarters and finds him dead.

Next morning HARRY shows Millicent a handkerchief (there) he found in the chauffeur's room and asks her to find out if it belongs to VERA DUCHENE, Mrs. HARRY's maid. Millicent goes to her room and finds Vera there.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIII

MILLICENT said, "I don't think I have to explain anything that I have done to you. If there are any explanations to be made, I'll make them to Mr. Hupp personally."

"Or to the police," Vera Duchene said.

Millicent shrugged her shoulders. After all, she would have to face the facts sooner or later, and she determined to go directly to Mr. Hupp and tell him the truth.

Vera Duchene, holding up the dress triumphantly, said, "You know what will happen when the police find out about this?"

"I fail to see that it concerns you in the least," Millicent told her.

Vera Duchene crossed to a chair, still holding the muddled dress, sat down and surveyed Millicent with cool, impudent eyes.

"It happens," she said, "that it is going to make quite a bit of difference to you."

"I'm sure I don't care to discuss it with you," Millicent said. "And if you wouldn't mind leaving the room, I have some work to do."

"When I leave," Vera Duchene said savagely, "I'll take this dress with me."

"Go ahead and take it if you want to," Millicent remarked with a great show of indifference.

Her manner puzzled the maid. She stared at Millicent for a few seconds, then said in a more conciliatory tone, "But I don't want to get you into trouble, dearie."

"Don't call me dearie!" Millicent told her, "and go ahead and make all the trouble you want. By the time you're where we'll find out just where we stand."

"Now wait a minute," Vera Duchene said. "Don't misunderstand me. We're all of us open to suspicion on some things, and we've all of us got to stand together."

"What do you mean by that?"

VERA DUCHENE shrugged her shoulders.

"I'm afraid," Vera said, "if the police should check up on me, they'd find that I didn't get in until quite a bit later than I would like to have them think. Also they might find that I was with someone who might have some embarrassing explanations to make. You know how those things are, dearie . . . that is, Miss Graves."

Millicent, waiting, wondered what was coming next.

"So," Vera Duchene went on, "you thought . . . that is I thought that you could say that I came home about 11 o'clock, and came into your room for a chat; that I'd heard that Mr. Hupp had employed a new secretary and I came in to get acquainted. You could say that we sat up and talked for an hour or so, and then you suggested that I stay here with you and that I slept here until early in the morning when I went to my own room to change my clothes. That would give both of us an alibi and protect us from having the police ask unnecessary questions."

The temptation almost overwhelmed Millicent. Here was the opportunity to give herself a perfect alibi. Here would be a chance to positively disclaim ownership of the handkerchief.

But Millicent realized that this was only a temptation.

Slowly she shook her head.

Savage rage twisted Vera Duchene's features. "You've got to," she said.

"I won't."

"I tell you you will." "I tell you I won't. Get out of my room."

"I'll get out fast enough," Vera Duchene said savagely. "You think over what I've told you. If you haven't a different answer for me within two hours, I'm going to take this dress directly to Detective Buchanan."

"Go ahead," Millicent said. "See if I care."

"And don't worry," the maid went on, "but what Detective Buchanan will put you over the jumps. By the time I get done with him he'll realize this is one of the most significant pieces of evidence uncovered in connection with the entire case."

"Yes," Millicent said. "I noticed you were handing him that line about being a big strong man and he was lapping it up like a cat lapping up cream."

Sunset

I saw the day lean o'er the world's sharp edge,
And peer into night's chasm, dark and damp.
High in his hand he held a blazing lamp.
Then dropped it, and plunged head-long down the ledge.

With lurid splendor that swift paled to gray,
I saw the dim skies suddenly flush bright.
'Twas but the expiring glory of the light
Flung from the hand of the adventurous day.—E. W. W.

of Little Rock, who have announced their intention of discarding the code but against whom we as yet have no evidence of actual violation.

Because of the gravity with which the National Recovery Administration views the situation in Arkansas, permission has been given to Director Harrison to go direct to the United States attorney here instead of following the usual procedure of turning his information over to the Legal Department of regional headquarters in Dallas.

"The lumber industry is entitled to know that vigorous enforcement of the lumber code in Arkansas is intended by the NRA," Mr. Harrison said.

Mr. Harrison said that the West Helena company, whose announcement of abandonment of the code resulted in a strike of employees, is co-operating with the NRA to bring about a test of the code. Officials have agreed to permit several employees to go back to work at longer hours and lower wages to establish the fact of violation so that affidavits and other legal information may be obtained and filed against them.

The Chicago Mill & Lumber Co. has announced its intention of attacking the constitutionality of the code in its answer to injunction proceedings. The Wilson company has not announced what procedure it will follow, but Mr. Harrison and Mr. Isgrig expect an attack upon the code's validity.

Bruce Company Officially the E. L. Bruce Company is operating under the code. The Blue Eagles are still flying. A representative from the state NRA office said he was received with evasions Monday. The bulletin posted last week notifying employees of the 56-hour week and new hourly wages had been taken down, he said. There was no outward evidence of violation.

Strike Settled WEST HELENA, Ark. — (AP) — Accepting a new wage scale offered by the company, 1,250 employees of the Chicago Mill & Lumber Co. agreed Monday to return to work Tuesday morning to end a strike which started last Thursday after notice of wage reductions and longer hours was posted by company officials. The workers at a mass meeting agreed to accept five cents an hour less pay than prescribed by the lumber code, which the company abandoned, with the understanding that the difference between the code and new scales would be paid to them should government legal action force the company to resume operations under the code terms. Off-Suggested Reunion Blocked by Boastful G. A. R. Resolution

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — (AP) — The suggestion that the old soldiers of the South gather next year at a joint convention with the Union veterans of the war between the states brought an emphatic negative Monday from Gen. Harry Rene Lee, adjutant and chief of staff of the United Confederate Veterans.

In a letter to General Lee, Virginius Dabney, chief editorial writer of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, said he had been informed that a joint reunion had been blocked in the past because members of the Grand Army of the Republic had "insisted that the Confederates march in the parade with flags furled."

He said it might be possible "to persuade the G. A. R. to withdraw this proviso."

General Lee explained that "at one of their conventions the G. A. R. ordered us to furl our flags and put them in a museum if we wanted to have a joint reunion."

"It is not the present intention nor ever has been the intention of the United Confederate Veterans to seek to persuade or plead with the G. A. R. to revoke that obnoxious order that we furl our flags and deposit them in some warehouse or museum."

"The finest men in the South—gentlemen—followed that flag, and the proudest heritage of the Southern soldier today is that he followed through, unhesitatingly, the starry cross."

"And," the 89-year-old adjutant added, "we sure made good and everlasting history—and they ask us to stow them (the flags) in some depository. Well, hardly," the letter concluded.

General Lee said Dabney's suggestion was "one of many" similar communications he has received and turned down.

DETROIT, Mich. — (AP) — Francis J. Dillon, general organizer for the American Federation of Labor in the automobile industry, said Monday night that Akron rubber workers might rely upon "100 per cent co-operation" from A. F. of L. automobile workers if there is a strike in the rubber industry.

"That means the automobile workers will go out with them," Dillon declared. "We have taken our vote, and we have all the authority we need, as we will demonstrate if it becomes necessary."

The STORY of EASTER

On the first day of the week of His passion—known as Palm Sunday—Jesus, with His disciples, left Bethany for Jerusalem. Nearing its gates, the Lord dispatched two of His disciples to bring Him an ass and her colt on which, to fulfill an ancient prophecy, the Messiah was to enter the Holy City. As the procession drew near its destination, the adoring multitude strewed the Lord's path with their garments and with palm branches, shouting: "Hosanna to the Son of David! Blessed be the King who cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest!" When a turn in the road revealed the city in all its splendor, the psalm of triumph grew louder; but Jesus, envisioning the awful fate of Jerusalem and its inhabitants, wept. Later, while Jesus was being led to the Temple, Pharisees witnessed with impotent rage the great homage paid Him. After a short visit to the Temple, the Lord and His apostles returned to Bethany to spend the night.

New Orleans Man Claims Divorcee Shot Herself—Left With Body

NEW ORLEANS, La. — (AP) — After driving around the streets of New Orleans night and day from Saturday to Monday with the body of a pretty 21-year-old divorcee in the luggage compartment of his automobile, Steve Macaluso, 32, credit and discount manager of the Federal Reserve bank here, picked up the woman's sister and father Monday afternoon and drove them to police headquarters to report what he said was the woman's suicide.

There he parked the car with its gruesome load, and with the father and sister of the dead woman, Mrs. Grace Gonzales, he went to the office of District Attorney Eugene Stanley and announced that the woman had shot herself while they were riding Saturday afternoon and that her body was in his car in the street outside.

The district attorney and his assistants rushed to the parked car and, on Mr. Stanley's orders, drove it into the police morgue, where they opened the compartment and found the woman's body, with a bullet wound in the left breast.

Macaluso was arrested for questioning and an autopsy was ordered upon completion of which Dr. C. G. Cole, coroner, announced a verdict of "death following a gunshot wound, cause undetermined," and recommended investigation by the district attorney.

The girl's father, J. R. Wolfe, unemployed lumber shipping clerk, and her sister, Mrs. Irene Mallini, 23, a department store employee, were questioned.

Macaluso, District Attorney Stanley said, told him the girl shot herself about 3:30 p. m. Saturday on the Chef Menteur highway east of here about two hours after they had met by appointment in the lobby of a downtown hotel and they had driven around and had several drinks.

"To hell with everything," Macaluso said the girl shouted before she pulled his gun from the dashboard compartment and shot herself in the breast and slumped downward in the seat.

The New Deal

Controlling the flow of visitors, telephone calls, telegrams, and mail in to Roosevelt's inner office, McIntyre holds a unique strategic position. There are few outstanding liberals without some private complaint of inability to reach the president of inquiries in case they do get in, of mysterious leaks to their opponents after supposedly confidential White House visits.
McIntyre's influence extends throughout Washington. There are few administrative offices where a work from a White House secretary doesn't carry weight.
"Butterfly" of Capital
When the sagacious Louis Howe was in better health and in a position to transmit viewpoints and suggestions to Roosevelt, McIntyre wasn't such a problem to the progressives. But as Howe became increasingly ill and unable to function, the undercurrent of resentment against "Mac" grew.

He is a gay, genial soul who loves the social life opened to him by his rise to prominence. A friendly writer in a current magazine reports accurately that he is "out every night, flitting from party to party, besought by every lobbyist, contact man, political lawyer, and glory-seeker in town."
"Herein, according to the liberals, lies the explanation why in general only persons of a certain type can "get to" Roosevelt. McIntyre's friends include members of the Farley-Hurja political spoils group, senators of the conservative Pat Harrison-Joe Robinson-Jimmy Byrnes clique—with whom he feels at the fashionable Burning Tree club, admirals and "big navy" propagandists, lobbyists of various types—for shipbuilding, electrical equipment, Wall Street, and other interests, and wealthy administration playboys.
Friends Are Powerful
These friends, of course, will stand staunchly behind McIntyre. They would be quick to contend that "Mac," whose loyalty and devotion to Roosevelt is unquestioned, has been of invaluable service in protecting the president from left-wingers, peace lobbyist foes of the "power trust," and other purveyors of "half-baked ideas."
Although the effect of the secretary's contacts—conscious or unconscious—have usually been visible only to insiders, the Senate Munitions committee recently revealed an incident which at least indicates the type of influence McIntyre is able to wield.
Confidential memoranda from Arthur P. Homer, described as a "fixer" de luxe friend of admirals and of Roosevelt, said that Homer had approached Admiral Christian Joy Peoples following the navy's rejection of the Bath (Me.) Iron Works bid for two destroyers.
P. R. Proh-Poohs It
Peoples, according to the memo, approved a plan whereby Bath had 10 persons send telegrams to the White House. McIntyre, Homer recorded, had promised to present the telegrams to Roosevelt.
Bath got the destroyers which, according to testimony, were expected to yield a profit of more than $1,000,000.
Roosevelt was asked about it at a press conference and undertook to laugh it off. He supposed "Mac" made ten or a dozen promises like that every day. But that didn't mean he kept them.
McIntyre did publicity for the navy during the war and for Roosevelt in his 1920 vice presidential campaign. Later he represented newswired companies here until Joe Kennedy, new chairman of Securities Exchange Commission, reorganized one of them and let "Mac" out.
Then he joined the Roosevelt campaign organization. He has always been popular with most people here, for his chief assets are a sunny smile, a warm, friendly disposition, and loyalty to friends.
The undercurrent fight which now involves him in an expression of the never-ending battle here between liberals and conservatives. Transfer of McIntyre would be a major concession to the "left."

Ask New Election in City of Danzig

Opposition Parties Charge Nazis With Force and Fraud

Copyright Associated Press
FREE CITY OF DANZIG.—Charging the Nazis with illegal actions in Sunday's parliamentary elections, three anti-Nazi groups announced Monday night they will demand from the League of Nations a new vote. In a suburb of Danzig, two men were shot and another badly beaten in an outburst of violence.

The elections, which frustrated Nazi hopes of creating a dictatorship rule by failing to pile up the expected two-thirds majority, were branded illegal in three petitions drawn up demanding "restoration of freedom" in the so-called Free City.

These petitions will all be placed before the League Council May 18. Nazi opponents maintained the Germans smashed the Liberal constitutions of the district, framed under League of Nations control, creating one law for the Nazis and another for their opponents.

Final figures in the election showed the Nazis polled only 59.1 per cent of the votes instead of the 66.2-3 per cent needed to gain political control of the district. They failed by 17,549 votes to gain absolute ascendancy in Parliament by wiping out opposition parties.

Civil War Cost Is 5 Million Month

Union Veterans' Bill Huge 70 Years After Close of Conflict

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Seventy years after the close of the war between the states, the nation is still paying the bill—at the rate of more than $5,000,000 a month in pensions alone.

In January, the most recent month for which figures are available, the government distributed $1,372,782 in pensions to 15,211 veterans of the Civil war, and $3,905,013 to 105,690 dependents of veterans.

However, the pension rolls are dwindling rapidly. In February, there were 64 fewer veterans and 1,179 fewer dependents listed.

War Department records show that of the 2,128,948 Union soldiers in the Civil war, 67,558 were killed in action, 43,012 died of wounds, 224,586 died of disease while in service and 24,872 died of other causes, a total casualty list of 359,528.

Skyscraper Shut Down by Owners

20-Story Building in New York Fails to Earn Its Keep

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Something new in Wall Street retrenchment developed Monday with announcement by the Chase National bank that it would "shut down" the 20-story office building at 43 Exchange Place, in the heart of the financial district. Tenants were notified that their leases must be terminated by May 1.

The closing was decided upon because of the building's obsolete character and the fact that rents do not yield enough for upkeep.

Sleeping in your chair, Yvonne,
Do you sweetly dream
Of a tree of toy balloons

Do five swings away in a breeze,

Are there dolls and teddy bears,
And a sand pile, too?

Hamilton Will Be Executed May 10

Sentence of Death Pronounced Upon Texas' Notorious Gunman

HUNTSVILLE, TEXAS.—(AP)—Raymond Hamilton, lieutenant of the late killer Clyde Barrow, was sentenced Monday to die May 10 for the slaying of Major Crowson, a guard at Eastham state prison farm.

Before passing sentence, District Judge S. W. Dean asked the desperado if he had anything to say.

"I was convicted on perjured evidence," Hamilton cried out. They bragged to the last, he added.

"You did it because you could not keep me in the penitentiary."

The Eastham guard was killed when Hamilton made a break in January, 1934, with guns cached for him by Barrow and his gun-girl, Bonnie Parker, both later slain by Louisiana possemen.

Hamilton was recaptured but escaped nine months ago from death row here. Until he was surprised and retaken Friday night at Fort Worth Hamilton had roamed the South and Southwest.

Joe Palmer, also convicted of the crime, will be put to death at the same time. Palmer, who fled death row at state prison here with Hamilton last July, attempted to shoulder all the blame for the Crowson slaying when sentenced Saturday at Anderson, Texas.

Gov. James V. Alfred said at Austin that he was "not sure" he would grant Mrs. Steve Davis, Hamilton's mother, an interview. She had said at Dallas she would plead for her boy's life.

"She'd first have to talk to the State Pardon Board," Alfred said.

"They make recommendations on all commutations before I consider them. I intend to pass on the case on the record. I'm not sure that I'd see her at all."

Argument Ends on Flood Loss Claim

60-Million-Dollar Arkansas Case Submitted in Court of Claims

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Landowners seeking more than 60 million dollars for alleged damage to property in southeastern Arkansas from the government's flood control plan there concluded argument in the Court of Claims Tuesday on the government's demurrers to the suits.

The landowners allege destruction of property values from the inclusion of the Beaufort floodway in the flood control plan for the lower Mississippi valley.

into law the huge appropriation, as his train passed through South Carolina en route to New York, where he will attend the funeral Tuesday of his cousin, Warren Delano Robbins.

The bill had been sent by airplane from Washington to the president as he fished off the Florida coast. It had been the subject of the most bitter controversy at this season of congress.

The president issued at the same time two allocations of the fund—$125,000,000 for maintenance of direct relief and $30,000,000 for continuation of Civilian Conservation Corps.

Delay 30-Hour Bill
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—With development pointing toward an early supreme court test of NRA's constitutionality, the senate Monday refused to consider the Black 30-hour week bill.

Senator Couzens, Republican, Michigan, who voted for the 30-hour week two years ago, led the opposition in taking up the measure with the assertion the senate should wait for consideration of legislation to extend the recovery law.

The bill's author, Senator Black, Democrat, Alabama, replied there should be a law limiting the work week to 30 hours, regardless of what happened to NRA. But only 20 senators—six Republicans and 13 Democrats and La Fallette, the lone Progressive—voted with him. Fifty-six voted against considering the bill.

Several who voted against Black, Senator Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky, and McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, among them, explained their ballots were not to be interpreted as a vote against the bill itself.

Appeal Filed
Meanwhile, an appeal was filed in the supreme court in the Schechter poultry case. It is the case which the government hopes to furnish the basis for a test of NRA's constitutionality at this term of court.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals asked the high court for instructions in an effort to speed up a decision on NRA.

In a case involving the oil code, the circuit court pointed out that the Recovery Act—unless extended—expires June 16. It asked the supreme court for the answer to several questions. Among them were whether the standards for the control of production of petroleum are sufficiently defined in the Recovery Act.

Robinson in Role of Clerk-Gangster

Turns Comedian in Story of Man Who Looked Like Mannion

Edward G. Robinson, as a film comedian for the first time in his screen career, has been heartily endorsed by his legion of fans who have seen "The Whole Town's Talking." The picture is an adaptation by Jo Swerling and Robert Riskin of a W. R. Burnett story, which ran serially recently in a national magazine. Briefly, the story tells of the adventures of one Jones, clerk, after it is discovered that he bears a remarkable resemblance to Killer Mannion, Public Enemy No. 1. Through being mistaken for the outlaw, Jones is brought into the public eye, becomes famous and absorbs enough courage to propose marriage to the girl he loves. The comedy element enters when he is given a document from the District Attorney's office stating he is not Mannion, the killer, identifying him as Jones and requesting all officers not to molest him. Mannion, learning of the "passport," not only secures it from Jones, but insists upon living in Jones' apartment and assuming the identity of the clerk in order to perform a few underworld jobs which the activities of the police have so far prevented.

Character Work 'Made' Robinson

"Little Caesar" Is New Hit in "The Whole Town's Talking"

Edward G. Robinson, who has played roles ranging from light comedy to heavy tragedy on the stage, but who has become "typed" in pictures through his very successful impersonation of "Little Caesar" appears in his first serio-comic screen characterization as star of Columbia's "The Whole Town's Talking," showing Thursday and Friday at the Saenger Theater.

Having finally achieved the beginning of a diversity of roles, which is vital to the career of every character actor, Robinson was asked at a recent interview how an actor with a distinct type of face could achieve such a wide range of characterization, without recourse to makeup and costuming.

"Characterization," he pointed out, "is not a matter of facial grimaces; of overemphasized gestures or tricks. It isn't a matter of externals at all. It is entirely a matter of mind."

"Think as the character would think; project yourself into the part. The scriptures say: 'As a man thinketh, so he is,' and it is entirely true of characterization. Think your emotions and they will come out on your face. The actual muscular change is so slight that it can hardly be defined, but the expression mainly through the eyes, is there."

In "The Whole Town's Talking," Robinson is supported by an excellent cast including Jean Arthur, Wallace Ford, Arthur Hohl, Arthur Byron and Etienne Girardot.
